GARY, Ind. - The city of Gary has formally tossed its hat into the ring as a possible home for the Chicago Bears, pitching several sites across the city as possible locations for a new stadium and mixed-use development.

City officials announced Friday that three sites, ranging from 145 to 760 acres, have been put forth in an effort to woo the team, which nearly one month ago announced it would consider sites in northwest Indiana for a stadium amid an impasse with Illinois state leaders involving sites in Chicago and its suburb, Arlington Heights.

Mayor Eddie Melton said the proposal gives the Bears the tax certainty and stability the team said is key to success. In an interview with Inside Indiana Business host Gerry Dick, the mayor said he had a very positive conversation with the team prior to publicly presenting the proposal.

"I think we made a lot of noise [Friday] by rolling this out," he said. "I did get a phone call from the organization, and I don't want to go into any details, but it was very, very positive in tone and next steps."

Gary is about 30 miles southwest of Chicago and each of the three sites put forth by Gary—detailed on a website called BearStadiumDistrict.com and in a 20-page proposal—are considered "plug-and-play" by city officials, meaning they're generally ready for intensive commercial development. The three sites proposed are:

- A 400-acre site fronting Interstates 80 and 94, adjacent to the Hard Rock Casino Northern Indiana, in an area that has been dubbed the Gary West End Entertainment District;
- a 145-acre site called Buffington Harbor near Cline Avenue, which resides in an Opportunity Zone and the city's lakefront tax-increment financing district with space allowing for a marina development;
- and a 760-acre site called Miller Beach along the Lake Michigan shoreline, with access to multiple interstates and adjacent to the Indiana Dunes National Park.

Melton said his team is making a strong push for the site near the casino.

"[We have] the Hard Rock Casino, the number one casino in the state of Indiana and probably in the Midwest. [There's] also the new convention center that we're getting ready to build, in addition to the three new hotels that's going to be coming online," Melton said. "So, we knew that the Bears organization was looking to establish entertainment district. Well, we're halfway there."

Friday's announcement comes one day after Indiana lawmakers proposed a framework for the development of a new stadium governing body and financing mechanism.

Senate Bill 27 would create a Northwest Indiana Stadium Authority authorized to acquire land, finance capital improvements and enter into leases with private entities—including NFL teams. Gary officials said each of the sites would be able to accommodate the language presented in the bill SB 27, authored by Sen. Ryan Mishler, R-Mishawaka, and Sen. Chris Garten, R-Charlestown, marks the Indiana Legislature's first formal overture to the Bears organization after public comments from lawmakers, local officials in Hammond and Gary and Gov. Mike Braun indicating an appetite for bringing a second professional football franchise to the state.

Melton, a former state senator, said he has an established relationship with the Indiana Legislature and the governor's office that can help bring the project to fruition.

"I truly believe that this makes good business sense for the McCaskey family and the other minority shareholders at the end of the day," he said. "I want to reassure the fans, as a lifelong Bears fan, that if this organization is able to make a sound business decision, it will benefit the entire organization and the fans to build on their current winning team, to make the investments that they need to continue to build a dynasty."

For nearly a month, the team has publicly expressed an interest in leaving Illinois if it can't work out at a deal in Arlington Heights, where it has acquired property, and has sent representatives to tour potential stadium sites in northwest Indiana.

On Friday, Arlington Heights officials made a plea to Illinois lawmakers to pass legislation that would make it easier for the Chicago suburb to strike a deal with the Bears.

Melton said he agrees with Indiana lawmakers who have expressed a sense of urgency in working lure the team to the Hoosier State.

"The state of Illinois is very concerned," he said. "A lot of elected officials have reached out, and they're trying to figure out, what can they do now to entice and keep the Bears there? So, I think time is of the essence. This is a priority to the organization."

Earlier this week, Indianapolis law firm Taft Stettinius & Hollister LLP registered as a lobbyist in Indiana for a Bears-affiliated holding company, allowing the team's interests to be represented at the Statehouse.

"The media has asked if Gary is serious. Our answer is in the legislation and on the map," Gary Common Council President Linda Barnes-Caldwell said in a written statement. "We are not just offering land; we are offering a partner who moves at the speed of business. With the backing of the Statehouse and the specific tools provided by Senate Bill 27, we are ready to break ground while others are still breaking promises."
